leading emotional actrament is again in the limelight—this time as a Paramount star, and in her initial production under that hadner. At the End of the World, which was shown at the Breed theatre last night, she achieved a veritable triumph by her artistic portrayal.

The new picture, which is from the play by Ermst Klein, neapted by Eddrid A. Bingham, concerns the love affairs and vicinstitutes of Cherry, the daughter of an Englishman who rups a Chinese gambling house and cafe in Shanghai. China. It is a dramatic story, well presented, and supplies many thrilling moments. Milton Sills, Mitchell Lewis, Casson Freguisen, Spottiswoode Althen, Joseph Kligour and Goro Kino rendered adequate support.

At the End of the World is the feature at the Breed again today, and other pictures on the bill include Johnny Hings in Torchy's Nighthood and the Pathe news. The Breed will be closed Wedneday, Thursday and Friday of this week to undergo a general overhauling, and will reopen Saturday under new manners.
